THE RUINS

INCA RUINS MAP 5

The Inca city of Machu Picchu was erected on a cliff 3000 feet above the Urubamba river. Built in the late 1400s, Machu Picchu was one of several fortresses that protected the larger city of Cuzco. The city was mysteriously deserted by its inhabitants long before the arrival of the Spanish. This fact has contributed to the many legends surrounding Machu Picchu. Some believe the cliff on which the village stands is a site of great power—an intersecting point of the invisible forces that circle the earth, and that is why the Incas built here. The city has fallen into ruin, but can still be explored.

NAZCA MAP 6

Nazca, a high altitude plain in South America, hides one of the wonders of our planet. The first airplane pilots to fly over Nazca were stunned to look down and see gigantic outlines of animals and insects drawn across the entire plain. From the ground, these figures are not visible to the eye, appearing to be random piles of rock. Some of the lines are laid out in patterns like an airport, and a space shuttle mission reported seeing a 30-mile long arrow. One theory about these hieroglyphs is that they are messages to passing spaceships, left by a long forgotten race.

MU MAP 12

Historians deny the existence of Mu, an ancient continent supposedly swallowed by the Pacific Ocean thousands of years ago. But among those who live on the islands of the Pacific, stories about Mu are still being told from generation to generation. It is believed that the Moai statues of the Easter Islands and the ruins on the Ponape Islands are the last surviving relics of this lost civilization. The many legends name differing causes for the sinking of Mu: that its people angered their gods, that an earthquake broke it to pieces, that ancient science went too far and destroyed itself.

Stretching for 1500 long miles, the Great Wall of China was raised by hundreds of thousands of people struggling for decades. It soars high above the clouds, crossing mountain peaks, and descends into valleys and baking deserts. This incredible structure was built to protect China from invaders such as the Hiong-hu, the ancestors of Attila the Hun. The Great Wall has 30,000 towers that once housed thousands of soldiers on patrol. The Wall is the only man-made structure that can be seen in pictures of Earth taken from the moon, appearing as a long scratch across the continent.

ANGKOR WAT .. MAP 19

The magnificent temples of Angkor Wat have fascinated historians and mystics alike for centuries. It is a city of stone and water, with towering spires and deep moats. Once the capital of the Khmer Empire, Angkor Wat is now the silent home of a million ghosts who will not share their secrets. Around 1431, the city was mysteriously abandoned—its population simply disappeared. When a Siamese army arrived decades later to conquer Angkor Wat, the soldiers found only emptiness and refused to stay within the silent walls. Why the citizens left and where they went is a mystery that has never been solved.

PYRAMID MAP 21

One of the purposes of the pyramids, it is believed, was to house the remains of the pharaohs who built them. However, no tombs have been found in the Great Pyramid, which was built around 3350 BC. The Great Pyramid is positioned so that each side faces north, south, east, and west, and it is located in the geometric center of the Nile delta. Some scholars feel that they can read predictions about the future of Earth in the stones and carvings of the Great Pyramid. But to this day, the secrets of this ancient wonder are undiscovered, tightly sealed and protected within its stone walls.

TOWER OF BABEL MAP 22

A young and foolish race of humans believed they could climb up to the realm of gods and converse with them. The Tower of Babel was therefore erected, and became the tallest structure in the world during its time. Legend has it that climbing to the top took almost half a day. But the Tower did not survive long. A great storm rose up and smashed it back into the ground. At the same time, the single language of man was scrambled into a thousand different tongues. Those few who survived the destruction claimed that the tower was destroyed by the wrath of those very gods they had sought to reach.
